

SUPREME COURT OF CANADA

STATISTICS
1997 TO 2007

Bulletin of Proceedings:
Special Edition

INTRODUCTION

This special edition of the Bulletin sets out a statistical view of the work of the Supreme Court of Canada in 2007 with comparisons to the previous ten years' work.

The following brief description of the appeal process is provided to help explain the statistical charts and tables. The Court decides cases that come to it from three sources. First, in most cases, a party who wishes to appeal the decision of another court (usually a provincial or territorial court of appeal or the Federal Court of Appeal) must obtain permission from a panel of three judges of the Court. Such permission, or leave to appeal, is given if the panel concludes that the case involves a question of public importance or raises an important issue of law. Second, there are cases, referred to as "as of right" appeals, for which leave to appeal is not required. These include certain serious criminal cases, for example, those where there is a dissent on a point of law in the court of appeal, and appeals from provincial references. The third group is references from the federal government. Federal references (which are counted as appeals as of right for the purposes of these statistics) require the Court to give an opinion on the questions referred to it by the Governor in Council. The figure on page 3 summarizes the process that unfolds from the filing of a complete application for leave to appeal, a notice of appeal as of right or a reference.

The "Summary 1997 to 2007" table on page 4 outlines the Court's workload for that period and is broken down into five categories. Graphical representations for each category are also provided.

The first category, "Cases Filed", shows the number of complete applications for leave to appeal and notices of appeal as of right filed by litigants with the Court's Registry each year. The total of 618 cases filed in the year 2007 represents a nearly 20% increase over the number of cases filed in 2006 (513). The number of cases filed in 2007 is consistent with the annual average number of cases filed over the last ten years (596).

The second category, "Applications for Leave Submitted", shows the number of leave applications submitted to panels of the Court for decision, the number of leave applications granted and the percentage granted of the total submitted. As leave applications filed one year may be submitted to a panel the next year due to the time required for processing, the number of complete leave applications filed and the number submitted to panels will differ in each year. In 2007, there were 602 leave applications filed with the Court and 629 submitted to panels of the Court for decision. The total number of leave applications submitted to the Court for decision in 2007 is 32% higher than the number submitted in 2006.

The third category, "Appeals Heard", shows the number of appeals heard each year and the number of hearing days over the year. In 2007, the Court heard 53 appeals over 46 hearing days. The number of appeals heard was 39% lower than the average number of appeals heard over the previous ten years (87).

The fourth category, "Appeal Judgments", gives information with respect to the number of judgments rendered each year. The Court released 58 judgments in 2007. Of these, 2 were pronounced from the bench ("oral judgments"), with no written reasons to follow. In 62% of the judgments, all judges agreed in the result of the appeal.

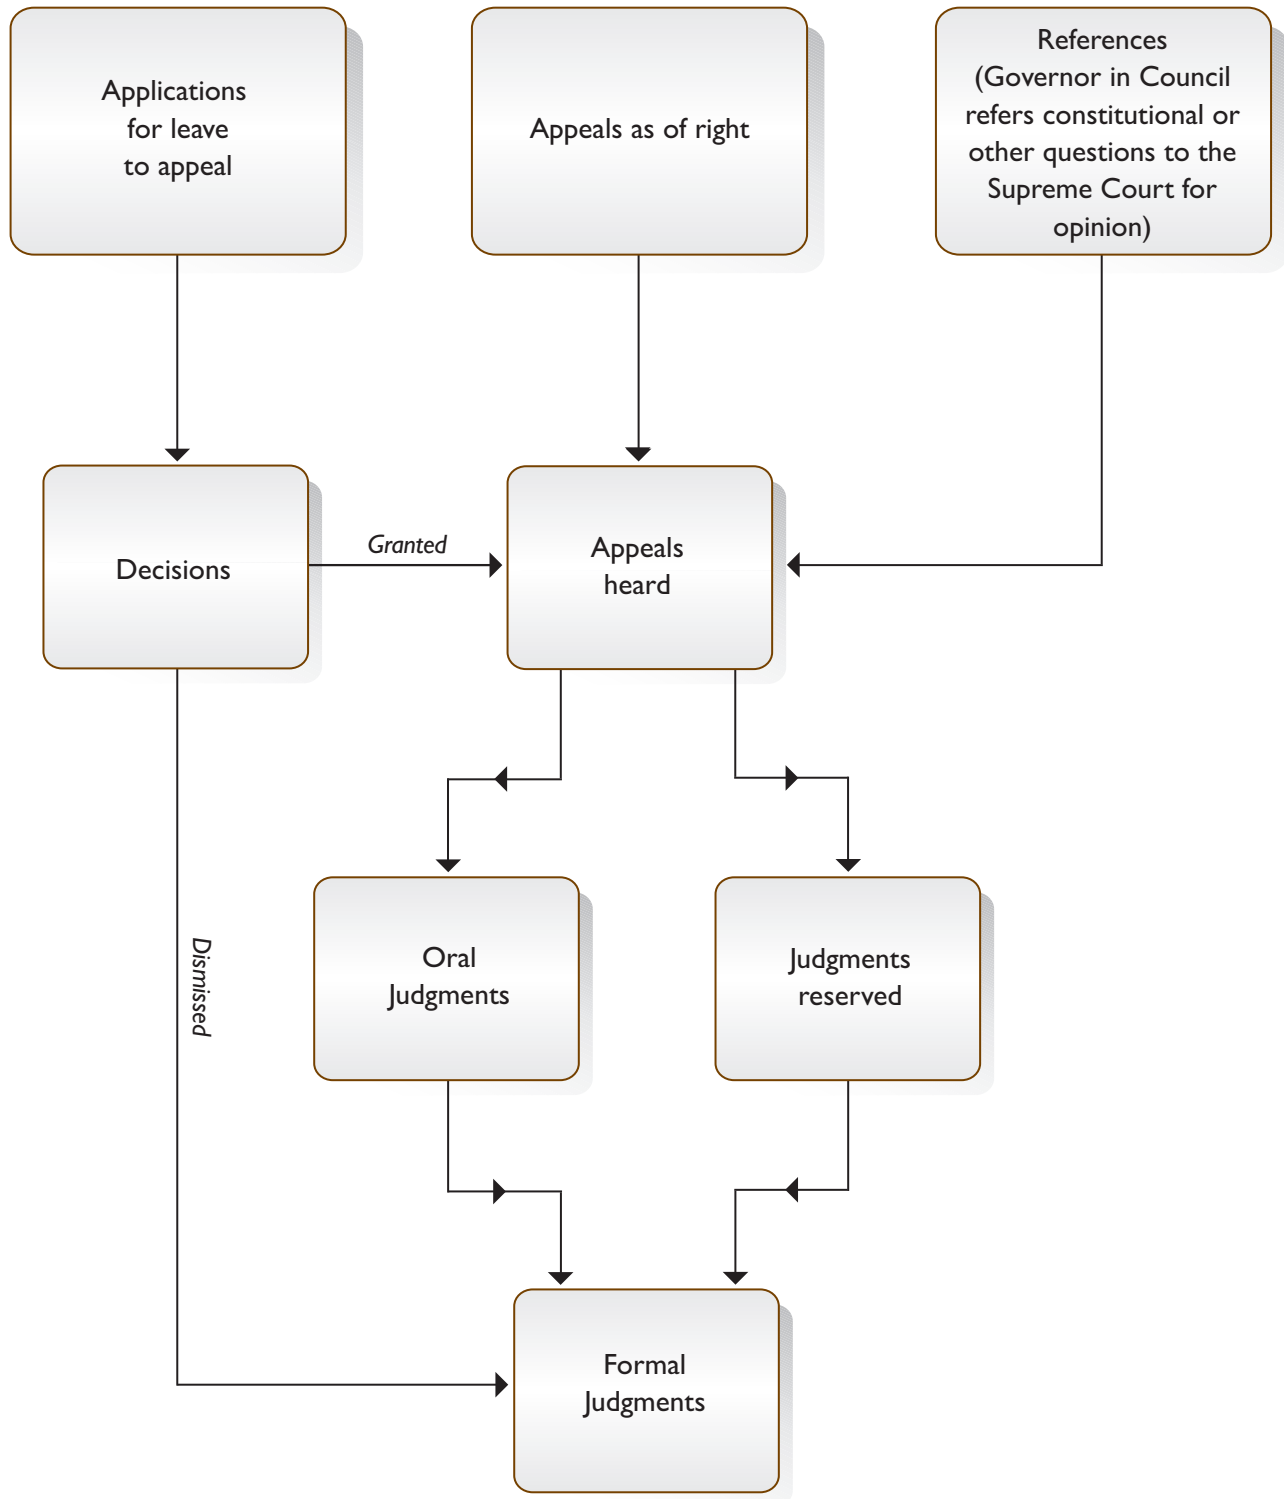

Since the Court does not always render judgments in the same year in which the appeal is heard, there is usually a difference between the total number of appeals heard in a year and the number of judgments rendered in the same year. There were 30 appeal judgments in reserve at year-end.

The final category, "Average Time Lapses", shows time lines in the life of a case at the Court. On average, in 2007, the time between the filing of a complete application for leave to appeal and the Court's decision on whether leave should be granted or denied was 3.5 months. In 2007, appeals were heard, on average, 9 months after leave was granted or the notice of appeal as of right was filed. In 2007, the Court rendered judgment, on average, 6.6 months after the hearing of an appeal. This figure includes oral judgments. The average time lapse between the hearing of the appeal and the delivery of reasons (including cases where judgment was reserved and where judgment was rendered with reasons to follow) was 6.8 months. All categories show slight increases over 2006.
