1. SPECIFIC SUPPORT FOR JUSTICE SECTOR REFORMS

1.1. Research

FILE NO. 1/2016

Improving Access to Civil Justice in Latin America

Objectives:

1. To generate knowledge of the main challenges of civil justice reform and provide technical assistance for the implementation of reforms or pilot plans.
2. To develop training activities for future decision-makers who will serve in institutions and the private sector.

Location(s): Regional

Funding source(s): Global Affairs Canada (GAC)

Expected impact or results:

- Research (100)

For Component 100, the main research activities that will establish the foundations for this project are at an advanced stage of development.

Select international studies (Component 110)

110: “Research on Civil Procedure in Germany,” directed by consultant Norbert Lösing, a German attorney who holds a doctorate in Law from University of Bonn. The final objective of the consultancy will be a study on civil procedure in Germany, which will present the situation in Germany and serve as a reference for designing and analyzing Latin American civil procedures.

Topics: general description of German procedure, alternative dispute resolution mechanisms after most recent regulatory reforms, small claims justice handled by municipal courts, the structure of administrative management and judicial organization, the exercise of law, resources, evidence, procedure monitoring and collective processes or class actions.

Last May a workshop was held in Lüneburg, Germany to validate the methodological report and meet with municipal judges from that town. JSCA staff (Jaime Arellano, Marco Fandiño and Leonel González) visited local municipal courts, observed small claims hearings and toured administrative units.

110: “Study on Civil Justice in Spain”

Like the previous study, this consultancy will focus on the operation of civil justice, this time in Spain. It was assigned to José Alberto Revilla, a Spanish attorney who holds a doctorate in Law from Universidad Carlos III Madrid.

Topics: civil trial law reform; the appeals system: current structure, main operations and discussions; use of oral procedures; main trends in evidentiary matters; small claims: the civil system’s capacity to handle small claims or less complex cases; access to justice: critical analysis of barriers to justice and measures for reducing them; addressing the costs of civil proceedings; monitoring: data on operations and discussions; and execution.

The goal of these studies is to generate references that can be used to assess the design and operation of civil justice in Latin America and thus obtain various parameters for comparison.
Last May, a meeting was held in Madrid to validate the methodological report presented by the consultant and meetings were held with attorneys and judges to validate data on the system’s operation. Oral trials were observed in civil court. JSCA staff members Jaime Arellano, Marco Fandiño and Leonel González took part in these activities.

Practical reports (Component 120)

Multidisciplinary dialogue (120)

Publication focused on the advantages of civil justice reform and/or modernization from the perspective of various disciplines in the social sciences in order to provide theoretical and practical tools for the design of comprehensive civil justice and a multidisciplinary perspective.

The articles are listed below:

2. The influence of constitutional and international human rights law on civil procedure law, Roberto Saba, Argentina. The final version has been submitted.
3. The potential of transformative dispute resolution systems in Latin America’s reformed civil justice procedures. Rosa María Olave, Chile. Submitted.
4. Facts and arguments in the area of legitimation, Roberto Gargarella, Argentina. The final version has been submitted.

Local and comparative studies in Latin America (Component 130)

Uruguay: “Study on the civil justice system in Uruguay” (130)

The purpose of the study is to update research on civil procedure in Uruguay that was conducted in 2006. The original report was entitled “Civil justice reform in Uruguay: Ordinary civil procedures using hearings.” The main goal of the new study will be to research the use of hearings in civil and commercial cases in Montevideo. Specifically, the authors will measure the impact of the reforms made to the General Procedure Code through Law 19.090/2013. JSCA Board of Directors Vice President Santiago Pereira will coordinate this study.

JSCA also will include a section that will identify the operation of the court management and administration model applied in Montevideo’s civil and commercial courts in order to compare them to the management model that JSCA believes a justice system in which hearings are used should have.

A meeting was held in June to review the plan in Montevideo. JSCA staff members Leonel González, Marco Fandiño and Lorena Espinosa attended.

In regard to the new section of the study, data was collected in August through interviews and hearing observation. The work was conducted by JSCA staff members Juan José Martínez and Lorena Espinosa.

La Rioja: “Baseline study: The state of civil justice in La Rioja” (130)

The main goal was to conduct a baseline study on civil justice in La Rioja, Argentina. The specific goals are:

1. To identify the number of civil justice cases in the La Rioja system, including the numbers of cases filed and closed, congestion rates based on procedural stages, bottlenecks and critical nodes;
2. To analyze the exercise of jurisdictional work with a focus on workloads, resolutions, use of alternative measures and methodologies;
3. To identify the functions and tasks assigned to civil courts personnel as well as the management and internal organization model of civil courts;
4. To analyze the exercise of private law in the civil arena in La Rioja; and
5. To develop proposals for improving civil justice in La Rioja based on the following criteria: access to justice (in geographic, cultural and economic terms), improvement of response times, and procedural simplification.
Francisco Verbic, an Argentine attorney with a degree from Universidad Nacional de La Plata who is part of the Argentine Procedure Law Association, is coordinating the study.

The initial meeting with the province’s public prosecutor’s office was held in April and was attended by JSCA Research and Studies Coordinator Marco Fandiño and staff member Consuelo Ghisolfo. The methodology will be expanded in order to conduct the baseline study. A work timeline was drafted. Mr. Verbic is currently working on the final version of the study and is scheduling a presentation to be held in La Rioja in the next few days.

Study on “Training practices of Latin American judicial academies” (130)

The purpose of this study is to identify “good practices” and “promising practices” that Latin American judicial academies are implementing in their training. The study will contain a baseline that can be used to make recommendations on five topics: identification of training needs, evaluation of training, design of an innovative curriculum, development of innovative methodologies and the use of international networks in training.

We also plan to create an instrument that allows each judicial academy to identify new practices that could be applied to their local reality and identify improvements that can be made in each entity.

Experiences were gathered from 15 judicial academies in the region (Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Puerto Rico, Uruguay, and Mexico). The information is being organized and the manual will be drafted. JSCA is also working on a workshop to validate the study, which will be held in December. The final product will be published in early 2017.

“Peace justice in Latin America: The basis for democratic and republican justice” (130)

The general objective is to gather information on the state of peace justice in the region in order to develop a comparative analysis of the various ways in which this form of justice is expressed at the Latin American level. The project also will identify best practices that can be replicated in order to disseminate this new form of justice.

The study will be carried out by Silvina Ramírez, an Argentine attorney who holds a doctorate in Law from Universidad Nacional de Buenos Aires.

The specific goals of the study will be:

a. To analyze the general situation of peace justice in Latin America based on an initial assessment;
b. To identify the dominant and secondary peace justice models in the region;
c. To link peace justice to small claims justice in the civil procedure reform;
d. To connect peace justice to access to justice as one of the ways of guaranteeing swift, adequate responses on the part of the ordinary justice administration system;
e. To analyze the organizational structure of peace courts and public policies that impact their operation;
f. To conduct an in-depth study of at least three countries that have made significant progress in this area: Argentina, Colombia and Peru; and
g. To develop a proposal for a model of peace justice as a public policy connected to civil justice reform processes.

Field work is being conducted through qualitative interviews with key stakeholders and non-participant observation in three jurisdictions that will be studied in-depth: Colombia, Peru and the Río Negro Province of Argentina. The final version of the report should be submitted in December.

Support for pilot projects (Component 140)

Citizen Justice Center, Chile

In December 2015, the Supreme Court approved the idea of implementing Citizen Justice Centers based on a pilot project that was tested in Antofagasta and Temuco. The purpose of the centers is to provide the public with an opportunity to engage in the use of alternative dispute resolution mechanisms and the provision of justice.

JSCA considers this proposal a good practice in the improvement of access to civil justice because the majority of cases that these centers seek to handle to not currently gain access to the justice system. In order to support the implementation of pilot projects in Chile, JSCA is working in coordination with the Judicial Branch to expand the proposal. The Center has proposed developing manuals to train the individuals who will work in Citizen Justice Centers.

Best practices (Component 150)

Competition on experiences with innovation (150)

JSCA organized an open competition to report civil justice experiences in the region that involved reforms or changes but were not necessarily framed by legislative developments. The goal is to disseminate these experiences among individuals who are working in the justice sector and decision-makers involved in this area. The Center will thus contribute ideas and tools so that they may replicate and/or consider ideas for changing their own civil justice systems.

The competition began in March, and approximately 17 proposals were received. Eight articles were selected in April, 4 from Argentina and one each from Colombia, Chile, El Salvador and Panama.

The selection was conducted using a procedure established by JSCA to provide minimum standards for the finalists. The procedure was set out in a document that was sent to researchers at the beginning of the process. The final documents are being reviewed for publication by JSCA.

Reform proposals (Component 180)

Tucumán (180)

The objective of this project is to contribute to the development of a comprehensive public policy proposal that can serve as an input for the discussion, design, approval and implementation of a civil justice reform. A technical cooperation proposal was submitted to the inter-branch commission, which is leading this movement in the province. The proposal addressed the process of the study and preparation of possible civil procedure reforms in the process based on ten areas: objectives to guide the comprehensive reform of the civil justice system, the assessment of unmet legal needs, alternative dispute resolution mechanisms, judicial organization reforms, judicial management reforms, training strategy, ICTs, foundations for a new civil and commercial procedure code, and an implementation plan.

Various meetings have been held and a calendar has been set based on the collaboration proposal. We are currently working on two aspects of this plan: the agency responsible for the unmet judicial needs study has been identified (the National Scientific and Technical Research Council, CONICET) and statistics were gathered in addition to available data on areas related to civil justice in order to have a global perspective on their operation.

The third working session was held in the province in November to gather qualitative data on the operation of civil justice, a meeting was held with the inter-branch commission to establish the objectives of the reform, and we met with members of the institute responsible for the study on unmet legal needs.

The objective of this project is to develop a reform proposal that improves Paraguay’s civil justice system. The country does not yet have a civil justice reform movement, so the Center for Judicial Studies (CEJ) has been asked to conduct a study to identify problems with the operation of the civil justice system. In addition, we will ask various stakeholders from civil society, institutions and businesses interested in civil justice reforms to provide feedback on this process. We have agreed upon a strategy with CEJ and will be signing the contract over the next few days so that we can complete these activities and obtain the product before the end of FY2.

Costa Rica (180)

Next year, Costa Rica will implement a new Civil Code Reform. JSCA has started talks with the Supreme Court, which is responsible for implementing the new code. In order to support its implementation, JSCA will provide two manuals for judges and attorneys working in the new oral civil justice system. One will focus on skills for managing hearings (for judges) and the other will focus on oral litigation (for attorneys). (See Component 200.)

Meetings were to be held in San José on November 24 and 25 to work on the manuals so that there would be shared understandings of the vision of the Supreme Court. The meetings were postponed due to Hurricane Otto.
Training (Component 200)

Development and execution of training program on civil justice reform in Latin America (210)

Inter-American Training Program for Civil Procedure Reform (210)

The objective of this program was to provide tools and new paradigms of analysis to key stakeholders with legal training (judges, operators and law professors) in order to promote the implementation of civil justice reform in their local professional fields. The goal is to empower participants to promote changes in their jurisdictions through innovative projects that can be implemented with the help of JSCA.

The course lasted for 4 months (75 hours on site and 36 virtual). The first on site course was held August 22-26 in Santiago de Chile. The virtual phase ran from August 29-October 28 and the second on site class was held from November 7-11, also in Santiago. A total of 25 students attended.

We received innovative proposals for work in the areas and countries of each student. Some of these proposals were selected during the second on site phase to determine whether they can be executed as replicas at the local level with JSCA’s support.

The first phase was evaluated by the students through an anonymous survey. In their responses, 81.8% rated the activity as very good and 18.2% as good. In regard to the methodology used and module contents, 81.8% and 77.3% rated them as very good, respectively. Finally, 70% rated the instructors as very good or good.

Development of litigation manual for civil trials (210)

This consultancy is part of the construction of substantive materials for the Inter-American Training Program for Civil Procedure Reform. It will allow JSCA to structure the contents and will serve as a theoretical input for the 2017 version of the program.

Users will be able to identify the structure of a civil procedure using hearings, case theory for civil litigation, the various types of trials and preliminary hearings, litigation and general aspects of the production of evidence and tools linked to litigation such as negotiation.

An initial review and validation of the manual contents was held at JSCA last July. The final version was delivered on August 1. A final validation workshop has been scheduled for later in December.

Hearing management manual for civil judges (210):

This publication is especially for judges. The goal is to allow them to identify fundamental roles played by the judge during the hearing; the strategic meaning of the judge’s work; a hearing management methodology; and management of specific types of hearings including small claims cases, conciliation hearings, preparatory hearings and oral trial hearings.

The manual was delivered on September 12. A validation workshop is scheduled for late December along with a workshop to discuss the oral civil litigation manual. They will be scheduled together because they have various points in common.

a.4 Mediation manual (210)

The goal of this consultancy was to develop a manual on key topics including a brief description of alternative dispute resolution methods, mediation and its main principals, procedure, techniques, styles and topics related to the agreement, adjusting mediation procedure to fit the conflict and skills for parties to a mediation.

The final version of the text will be ready soon. It is part of the development of substantive materials for the Inter-American Training Program for Civil Procedure Reform.

Manual on judicial organization and case management (210)

In order to better meet the project’s annual objectives, the authors agreed to postpone the development of this manual until 2017.
Manual on small claims justice (210)
In order to better meet the project’s annual objectives, the authors agreed to postpone the development of this manual until 2017.

JSCA internship in Canada: Visit to NJI and planning of project activities (210):
This internship, which was designed to include a workshop on evidence in order to incorporate the Canadian perspective into JSCA training courses, was held in July. In addition, meetings were held to plan project activities such as the Osgoode Law School internship to be held in 2017.

Status: These activities were satisfactorily completed.

Component 230

Replica in Guatemala (230)
The workshop “Civil justice reform in Latin America” was held May 24 in Guatemala City. The half-day event was attended by 13 people. It consisted of a brief program with key stakeholders in order to present the main challenges and objectives of a civil justice reform from a local perspective. Guatemala is currently processing a bill that would introduce a new civil procedure code.

Replica in Quetzaltenango, Guatemala (230)
The workshop “Civil Justice Reform in Latin America” was held May 28 in Quetzaltenango. A total of 25 people attended the half-day program including key stakeholders. The workshop included the identification of the main challenges and goals of civil justice reform from a local perspective.

Replica in Nicaragua: Hearing management workshop (230)
A workshop on managing oral hearings was offered in Managua, Nicaragua last April for 80 Nicaraguan judges. Participants acquired tools that will allow them to work in a system based on hearings. Specifically, they developed skills for developing and understanding case theory, producing and overseeing evidence, managing objections and the use of prior statements, general and specific considerations of evidence, oral trial hearing simulations through roleplaying, the identification of the function of opening and closing arguments, conciliation techniques and the role of the judge in preliminary hearings.

Development of virtual courses (240)
Based on the consultancies described below, a new virtual course on evidence (burden, production, assessment and admissibility) will be developed. We also will create a course on collective processes and class actions and substantive materials for the Inter-American Training Program for Civil Justice Reform, specifically a manual on litigation in civil trials, a manual on hearing management, mediation, judicial organization and case management, and a manual on small claims justice.

Consultancy on the burden of proof (240)
The objective was to draft an article on the burden of proof in the civil process that could serve as the basis for a course on discussions of evidence in a reformed oral system. Universidad Alberto Hurtado (Chile) Civil Law Professor Lilian San Martín drafted a document on the topic of the burden of proof in Ibero-American civil law. She addresses questions such as the general theory of burden of proof (notions of duty, burden and self-responsibility), the burden of proof as a rule of the trial, burden of proof as a rule of conduct, the dynamic burden of proof (dynamic distribution of evidence as a response to the rigidity of traditional criteria of distribution), judicial strategies for dynamic distribution of evidentiary efforts, and a general overview of burden of proof in Ibero-American legislation.

Observations have been made and the consultancy should be submitted soon.

Consultancy on admissibility and assessment of expert evidence (240)
The purpose of this consultancy is to create a virtual course on discussions of evidence in reformed oral justice systems so that students can identify the concept of an expert and their characteristics, understand the paradigm of expert witnesses in a written system compared to an adversarial one (in regard to information production techniques, statements and examination), litigation and assessment of expert evidence at oral trial and requirements of admissibility of expert evidence.

The first version was submitted on September 15 and was approved without corrections by the staff.

Consultancy on collective processes and class actions (240)

A manual will be developed to identify the use of collective actions in Ibero-America and the advantages of collective processes so that users can promote their use at the local level. The consultancy focused on distinguishing between legitimation and adequate representation, requirements for collective suits and hearing and certification procedures, issues related to evidence and the appeals stage, the problem of parallel litigation, publicity and notifications in collective procedures, costs and honoraria and collective process systems.

The consultancy was approved and the final version has been satisfactorily delivered.

Specialized exchange activities (250)

Class Actions Workshop (250)

This three-day seminar was held October 5-7 in Santiago de Chile and addressed challenges and skills related to class actions. A total of 25 legal professionals who work on civil justice participated. They represented Chile, Argentina, El Salvador, Colombia, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Guatemala, Uruguay, Costa Rica and Brazil. The work was mainly conducted with NJI experts Justice Adele Kent and Justice Sheila Martin, both of Canada. The topics included the strengths and weaknesses of class actions in the countries represented and lessons that can be learned from Canada for the implementation of this mechanism at the local level.

Internships for Latin American Legal Professionals in Justice Sector Institutions (260)

Internship at York University: An internship to perform research at the Osgoode School of Law at York University will be held March 6-17, 2017. Four interns will be selected and funded through the project.

As of November 28, a total of 58 applications had been received from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela and Trinidad and Tobago.

The objective is to support the civil procedure reform processes of Latin American countries, offering professionals the opportunity to travel to Toronto, Canada to develop a research project based on the advantages of comparative observation provided by a visit to another country in order to extract lessons for the local experience.

Dissemination and communications (Component 300)

Dissemination through network meetings (Component 310)

International meeting: “The civil society agenda in judicial reform processes in Latin America” (310)

The goal was to bring together the NGOs that have historically worked in the justice sector in order to agree upon an agenda and lines of action in the area of judicial reform. In addition, the meeting was designed to elicit a critical, empirical perspective on justice system reforms that can contribute to deeper and more innovative changes to justice systems, which technicians and legislators often fail to include in the design of reforms.

The event was held October 26-28 and was co-organized with the Universidad Federal de Río de Janeiro (UFRJ) Law School. An average of 100 people attended each day.

The event led to the relaunch of the Latin American and Caribbean Network for the Democratization of Justice.

Dissemination through seminars (Component 320)

The international seminar “Current discussions of civil justice reform in Latin America” was organized in collaboration with Argentina’s National Ministry of Justice and Human Rights and with the support of Universidad Católica de Argentina, UCA.
The event was held October 13 and 14 at the Pontificia Universidad Católica de Argentina Law School. Sixty people attended each day on average. Sixty-seven percent of the participants were women.

It was the second seminar on civil justice organized by JSCA in the context of this project. Its objective was to provide information about the key aspects of civil justice reform in the countries of the region, expanding on the main topics of discussion:

- Overview of civil justice reform in Latin America
- Civil judicial organization and management
- Adversarial civil procedure
- General considerations of evidence in civil procedure
- Alternative dispute resolution mechanisms
- Collective processes and class actions
- Procedural simplification and small claims justice

The experience of community justice in New York’s Red Hook Community Justice Center was added to these topics of discussion. This entity forms part of the Center of Court Innovation.

In order to strengthen a network, a regional competition was held to solicit papers on the scopes and limits of appeals hearings and the role of superior courts and judicial government. Fifteen proposals were submitted and four were selected for presentation at the seminar:

- “The role of superior courts and judicial governments,” María Teresa Bográn, Honduras;
- “Scopes and limitations of appeals hearings provided for in the General Organic Procedure Code: The case of Ecuador,” Rita Gallegos;
- “The second instance of the ordinary civil proceedings,” Lineth Borja, Bolivia;
- “Between guardians and modernizers: Judicial councils and technological preparation of courts in Latin America,” Maricilene Baia, Brazil.

In addition, attention was drawn to province-level reforms in Argentina to describe the reality of the reforms at the federal level. The situation of the civil procedure reforms in the central and northern Argentine provinces (Tucumán, La Rioja, Córdoba and Salta) and southern provinces (La Pampa, Río Negro and Neuquén) were described.

FILE NO. 2/2016

Publication of the 2nd version of the Index of Online Judicial Services, ISJL

Objective: To create a tool to strengthen and improve justice sector institutions in terms of their relationship to users through their virtual platforms using healthy competition among the countries of the region.

Location(s): Regional

Funding source(s): International Development Research Centre (IDRC)

Impact or results: The results were published in March 2016 and the project was promoted on the Center’s website, via social media and in the regional press.
FILE NO. 3/2016

International Competition on Access to Justice

Objective: To improve the quality of the materials on access to justice that are available to the Latin American community.

Location(s): Regional competition. The initial presentation of the proposals selected was held April 7 and 8 in Santiago de Chile. The final stage of the competition took place September 28 and 30 in San José, Costa Rica.

Funding source(s): GIZ (Germany Cooperation Agency)

Impact or results: The objective of the project was to hold a regional competition of experiences with access to justice, identifying points of contact between the practices, decisions and criteria used to interpret and apply instruments related to access to justice in order to create a regional community archive on the topic.

A total of 79 initiatives were submitted between October and December 2015 from 18 countries in the region. The organizing team (JSCA-GIZ) reviewed them and selected 15 from 11 countries: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil (2), Chile, Colombia (2), Ecuador (2), El Salvador, Mexico, Panama, Peru (2) and Venezuela. All of them were presented at a workshop held in April.

The articles were reviewed and corrected by JSCA and ten finalists were chosen. A second meeting was held in San José, Costa Rica, and final changes were made. The final versions are ready and reflect the observations and recommendations made at the Costa Rica meeting. A publication containing all of them is forthcoming.

FILE NO. 4/2016

Study: Evaluation of the Criminal Procedure Reform Ten Years After Its National Implementation

Objective: To examine the operation of the criminal justice system ten years after the nationwide implementation of the criminal procedure reform in Chile, assessing its main progress and problems. The purpose is to identify current and future challenges related to the fulfillment of its key objectives through a broad review of documentation, institutional statistics and qualitative data (interviews with operators and non-participant observation of hearings).

Locations(s): Chile

Funding source(s): Chilean Ministry of Justice

Impact or results: The design stage is complete. JSCA gathered background information and defined the main aspects of the research. The group of local coordinators was formed and a panel of experts was organized to validate various parts of the research.

The methodological tools have been adjusted in collaboration with the Ministry of Justice and a validation workshop was held with a panel of experts in January. They discussed hypotheses, objectives and the methodology of the study; presented potential information gathering tools; and provided observations and comments and received proposals from those in attendance. The conclusions were incorporated into the new version of the methodological report.

The regional teams were formed in March and May and the instrument testing was conducted. JSCA’s team met with key institutions in the management of statistics linked to the operation of the criminal justice system such as the CAPJ and public prosecutor’s office. The formal request for statistics was submitted in order to facilitate information gathering and the scheduling of hearing observation by local teams.

In late May, training began for members of the teams to be led by local coordinators and a validation workshop was held to analyze the partial results of the information submitted by the local coordinators (May 31). We began to receive the statistical information requested of the institutions.

We also launched the qualitative data gathering work which was carried out by local teams using instruments designed by JSCA. This process is led by local coordinators with the assistance of students.

The gathering of qualitative data involved observing guarantee court oral hearings such as arraignments, oral trial preparation, abbreviated procedures, simplified procedures, conditional suspensions and reparatory agreements. Semi-structured interviews were conducted with local justice system operators including public defendants, parties to cases, assistant prosecutors, guarantee judges and oral trial court judges and administrators.

The first draft of the report is complete and will be submitted for review by a panel of experts during a validation workshop scheduled for December 12. The report will be submitted to the Ministry of Justice on December 21.

FILE NO. 5/2016

Competition on Experiences with Innovation in Civil Justice in Latin America

Objective: To report on experiences related to civil justice reform processes that are not necessarily characterized by the implementation of a new national procedure code. The goal is to present experiences that have been implemented that resulted in a change of an aspect related to the civil judicial system.

Location(s): Regional

Funding source(s): Global Affairs Canada (in the context of the project Improving Access to Civil Justice in Latin America)

Impact or results: Seventeen proposals were received from Argentina, Mexico, Chile, Panama, Nicaragua, Colombia and El Salvador. Eight proposals were selected: Argentina (4), Chile, Colombia, El Salvador and Panama. JSCA has received the corrected reports and is editing them so that they can be published.

Mission to Support Efforts to Combat Corruption and Impunity in Honduras, MACCIH

Objective: To provide specialized technical assistance to Honduran criminal justice system institutions to contribute to the improvement of prosecution capacities and the handling of complex crimes with a focus on specialized anti-corruption efforts. The work will involve the study and proactive interpretation of the criminal phenomenon and will generate spaces for socialization for the identification and planning of practical solutions to the system’s problems.

Location(s): Honduras

Funding source(s): To be determined.

Impact or results: To contribute to the OAS mandate to MACCIH in regard to criminal justice reform.

FILE NO. 7/2016

Advising the Tucumán Province Inter-Branch Commission for the Study of Civil and Commercial Procedure Reform

Objective: To contribute to the development of a comprehensive public policy that can serve as an input for the discussion, design, approval and implementation of a civil justice reform.

Location(s): Tucumán, Argentina

Funding source(s): Global Affairs Canada (in the context of the project Improving Access to Civil Justice in Latin America)

Impact or results: JSCA formulated a technical cooperation proposal for the inter-branch commission that is leading this movement in the province. Various meetings were held to establish a strategy and we are working on two aspects of this effort: we identified the agency responsible for conducting the study on unmet legal needs in the province (the National Scientific and Technical Research Council, CONICET), and gathered statistics on the operation of the various areas related to civil justice in order to have a global perspective on its operation.

In November, the third working session was held to gather qualitative data on the operation of civil justice. We also met with the inter-branch commission to identify the objectives of the reform and met with CONICET on their work on identifying unmet legal needs. JSCA is drafting a final report that will contain a comprehensive public policy proposal for Tucumán province. The document is to be submitted in March 2017.

International Meeting: The Civil Society Agenda in Judicial Reform Processes in Latin America, organized by JSCA with the support of Universidad Federal de Río de Janeiro.

Objective: To promote discussion of topics such as the future of criminal procedure reform in Latin America, challenges of civil justice reforms, judicial guarantees, and contributions to civil justice reforms in the improvement of access to justice from the perspective of NGOs that work on topics related to justice.

Location(s): Río de Janeiro, Brazil, October 26-28
Funding source(s): Global Affairs Canada (in the context of the project Improving Access to Civil Justice in Latin America)

Impact or results: Representatives of civil society from 14 countries attended, namely: Chile, Brazil, Venezuela, Argentina, Colombia, Honduras, Cuba, Mexico, Bolivia, Guatemala, Peru, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador and Paraguay. They took part in a 2.5 day conference during which they analyzed their role in judicial reforms in recent years as well as future challenges.

Relaunch of the Latin American and Caribbean Network for the Democratization of Justice

Objective: To bring together the NGOs that have worked closely on criminal justice topics with other organizations that focus on civil justice, access to justice or topics that affect the performance of those systems. The network will be coordinated by INECIP.

Location(s): Río de Janeiro, Brazil, October 28

Funding source(s): Global Affairs Canada (in the context of the project Improving Access to Civil Justice in Latin America)

Impact or results: Representatives of civil society from 14 countries attended, namely: Chile, Brazil, Venezuela, Argentina, Colombia, Honduras, Cuba, Mexico, Bolivia, Guatemala, Peru, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador and Paraguay.

Consultancy in Mexico to collaborate on the drafting of a bill to create a national public prosecutor’s office in collaboration with representatives of Mexican civil society

Objective: To contribute to efforts to develop a bill to create public prosecutor’s office based on Latin American experiences reported by JSCA.

Timing: November 2016-February 2017

Funding source(s): Foundation for Justice and the Democratic Rule of Law

Impact or results: To contribute to the discussion that is taking place in Mexico.

International Seminar: Current Discussions of Civil Justice Reform in Latin America. The event was organized by JSCA and the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights of Argentina with the support of Universidad Católica de Argentina, UCA.

Objective: To present information on key aspects of civil justice reform in the region, exploring the main topics of discussion:

- The current situation of civil procedure reform in Latin America
- Civil judicial organization and management
- Adversarial civil procedure
- General considerations on evidence in civil procedure
- Alternative dispute resolution mechanisms
- Collective processes and class actions
- Procedural simplification and small claims justice

Location(s): Buenos Aires, Argentina, October 13 and 14

Funding source(s): GAC, in the context of the project “Improving Access to Justice in Latin America”

Impact or results: Nearly 60 people attended the event each day. Discussions were held on topics of interest linked to civil justice reform in the region, providing information on national and federal experiences. In an effort to create a network, a regional competition for papers on two topics was held. The topics were Scope and Limitations of Appeals Hearings and the Role of Superior Courts and Judicial Government.

- Fifteen proposals were submitted and four were selected for presentation at the seminar:
  - “The role of superior courts and judicial government,” María Teresa Bográn, Honduras;
  - “Scope and limitations of the appeals hearing provided for the General Organic Procedure Code. The Case of Ecuador,” Rita Gallegos
  - “The second instance of the ordinary civil procedure,” Lineth Borja, Bolivia;
  - “Between guardians and modernizers: Judicial councils and technological preparation of courts in Latin America,” Maricilene Baia, Brazil.

Reform processes taking place at the provincial level in Argentina were highlighted in order to describe the reality of reforms at the federal level. The situation of civil procedure reforms in Central and...
Northern Argentina (Tucumán, La Rioja, Córdoba and Salta) was discussed, followed by that of southern provinces (La Pampa, Río Negro and Neuquén).

3.2 JSCA Internship Program

FILE NO. 70/2016

Pro Bono Internships

Objectives: To enrich JSCA’s work through the new approaches contributed by interns and to create connections with former interns in order to establish contact with local experts and institutions. The pro bono internships are mainly directed at students or recent graduates and are meant to provide participants with an opportunity to learn about and contribute to the various areas within the Center that work on judicial reform in Latin America.

Location(s): JSCA, Santiago, Chile

Funding source(s): N/A

Products: Thomas Holt of Harvard Law School and Chandler Carney of the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law joined the Center as interns. They work on human rights and environmental law.

In addition, six Chilean interns joined the Center, including law students and recent graduates. All of them were asked to support the Chilean Criminal Procedure Reform Evaluation. Their names are Romina Villarroel, Jaime Viveros, Javiera Campos, Alfredo Fernández, July Ramírez, David Rogers, José Francisco Rodríguez and Christian Garrido.

In July, Chile’s Verónica Retamal joined the team. She is a law student at Universidad Central de Chile and is interested in working on issues of criminal procedure reform and at-risk groups. The Center also welcomed Carmen Garrido of Spain, a master’s degree student in Governance and Human Rights at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. She is interested in justice reform in general with a focus on criminal justice.

During the second half of the year, four interns joined the Center to support the application of the new version of the IAcc: Bárbara Soto (U de Chile); Camilo del Fierro (U de Chile); Benjamín Sepúlveda (Niza Sophia-Antipolis University); Paloma Silva (U de Chile)
